THE ARMY WAS SLOW

Coxey May Find a Revolt on His Hands To-Night.

Jones Leads a Contingent of Three Men from Philadelphia.

Female Industrialists Organize—The Army Leaves Utah.

CHALK HILL, Pa., April 12.—The army of the Commonwealth had not regained its accustomed sprightliness when the bugle was sounded in the old colonial stage-house that brought the men slowly from the beds this morning.

Although 9 o'clock was the hour set for the march to be resumed, the men were slow to move, not being sufficiently in harmony with the movement to consider with cheerfulness the leaving of such warm and comfortable quarters for a plodding through the snow for a dozen miles.

The noon stop was at Somersfield, and the camp to-night will be at Petersburg, probably in a commodious barn. If the men have to spend the night in the thin tent, there will be a revolt. Friday the army will cross the line into Maryland.

PHILADELPHIA ARMY OF FOUR Christopher Columbus Jones Picks Up His Tent and Walks.

PHILADELPHIA, April 12.—Promptly at 8 o'clock this morning Christopher Columbus Jones, Division Marshal of Coxey's Commonwealth army, and three men started on their march to join the main body of the Commonwealth at Rockville, Md., a small town about fifteen miles from Washington. A few minutes before 8 o'clock Marshal Jones came forth from his headquarters at 1113 Fifth street, followed by about a dozen persons.

He paused on the pavement a few moments, and then shouted "March." The first person to make a move was a big six-footer, bearing a badly faded United States flag. The others followed a moment. The cold, drizzling rain had a dampening effect on their ardor, and all but two decided to stay in the city. These desertions had no apparent effect on Christopher Columbus Jones.

With a small tent wrapped in a shawl strap in one hand and a map of the route to be traversed in the other, the marshal and his three faithfuls, Secretary C. McKee, William Phillips and the big flag-bearer, followed by three or four hundred hooting men and boys, turned into Market street and were soon fairly launched on their dreary march. The army will travel but five miles to-day. Their first stop will be Darby, a small town on the outskirts of this city.

Marshal Jones had made great preparations for his army in Darby. He had the worshipping place of the Heavenly Recruits, had been engaged for Jones' funeral, and had a large hall, but the marshal now says his little tent will afford ample shelter for the army. Capt. Clark, who has posed as a dime museum freak, and a well-known character about town, deserted last night and left the army, but Marshal Jones says he will join the ranks later in the day.

Female Industrialists Organize. OAKLAND, Cal., April 12.—A female brigade of the Industrial army is being organized here. Two hundred names are now on the list. Arrangements are being made for transportation. East Frank Carter has been elected colonel, and last evening the first drill was held.

The Army Leaves Utah. SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 12.—A special from Utah to The Tribune says the Industrial Army left that place for the east at 12:30 this morning, in twenty box-cars on the Union Pacific road.

DEATH ON THE RAIL. Four Lives Lost and Several Injured in Two Freight Wrecks.

HARTFORD CITY, Ind., April 12.—In a freight train wreck yesterday, three men A. Bonham was instantly killed. Fireman James Tucker had both legs broken, and Brakeman Phillips was so badly injured that he has since died, while two other men were seriously hurt. The train was running over a horse. William Andrews and James D. Bonham, brakemen, were instantly killed.

Found in Gleason's Favor. Lawyer Jesse Johnson has just secured a reversal of judgment for his client, ex-Senator Paul F. Gleason, of Iowa, who was convicted by a jury brought by Ellis W. Crow to receive $2,000 for the use of horses from April 28, 1873, to November 1, 1874.

The Oregon Republicans. SPOKANE, April 12.—The Republican State convention adjourned last night, after some thirty or forty of State officers for the session had been elected. The Supreme Court, was nominated by the majority.

WARNICKE GIVES $3,000 BAIL.

Held for Shooting and Attempting to Rob Collector Dorris.

Chief J. Warnicke, of 331 Thirteenth street, who with one sold to the Grand Jury by Justice Tighe in the Butler Street Police Court, Brooklyn, on the charge of having shot and attempted to rob Collector William H. Dorris, of the Kings County Trust Company, at his home, 507 Sixth avenue, on the morning of March 24.

Dorris was called to the stand first this morning. He said that he was awakened early in the morning by a powerful odor of some drug. As soon as he opened his eyes he received a blow in the face, which was followed by a pistol shot. The ball entered his left thigh.

By the light of the flash of the revolver he saw the burglar, who he could not identify. The burglar, who he could not identify, testified that he had entered the house by forcing an entrance to the room where he found a large silk handkerchief of a peculiar red and black pattern, scattered with blood, lying on the floor.

Detective Peter McCormick, of the Fifth avenue station, said he arrived at Dorris' house about 4 o'clock in the morning of the trouble, and found that a basement window had been forced with a lump which was found in the hallway. McCormick said he discovered a footprint near Dorris' back yard fence. It was ten inches long and three and one-fourth inches wide. Dorris lives very near Warnicke.

McCormick said that he learned that Warnicke had a silk handkerchief like the one found in Dorris' room. He investigated and found two handkerchiefs in Warnicke's possession very like those found in Dorris' room. McCormick said that Warnicke first admitted that the handkerchief was his and afterwards denied it.

Warnicke told him that the handkerchiefs were issued to him by the ship's steward, while he was at sea. He said that United States warship some time between 1882 and 1883. He could not tell him what ship he received the handkerchiefs.

Paymaster Cathouns and Storekeeper Baker, of the Navy, said the detective said, told him that during their service in the navy they never knew of handkerchiefs while he was at sea. He said that Warnicke to have been issued in the Navy.

Paymaster John A. Anderson, who appeared for Warnicke, said he was ready to put up with the detective's evidence. Justice Tighe thought it necessary. The Justice said he was satisfied the case against Warnicke was proved. He said that time would be saved by sending it forward at once.

There is one milk dealer of 532 Tenth street, gave a bond in 3,000 for Warnicke's release, pending the action of the Grand Jury.

HIS HEAD STRUCK A GRATING. Boy's Skull May Be Fractured as the Result of a Quarrel.

Walter Bauer, ten years old, of 352 Vernon avenue, was held by Justice Goetting in the Lee Avenue Court, Williamsburg, to-day on a charge of assault.

His victim, Louis Zacharias, twelve years old, was not in court to-day, and he said that Bauer had struck him on the avenue. In a dangerous condition. The two boys had a quarrel on Monday night, and Bauer struck Zacharias with a brick, his head striking an iron grating, inflicting a probable fracture of the skull.

MISS POLLARD'S LETTERS. Lawyer Butterworth Reads Those Written to Rhodes.

Plaintiff's Mother Could Explain, "but She Is Not Called."

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Major Ben Butterworth had the floor again when the Pollard-Breckinridge case was resumed to-day. He began with the consideration of Miss Pollard's letters to James Rhodes, which he said were the foundation of the case. He did not care anything about the letters, he said, if there was no foundation for it to rest upon.

After reading some of those letters at length, he came to those which were dated at New Orleans, and which he said were written in Cincinnati and sent to her mother to mail to him.

GILROY BACK FROM ALBANY.

Only One Salary Increasing Bill Meets His Approval.

Says the Statement that He Will Not Run Again Is Unauthorized.

Mayor Gilroy returned this morning from Albany, where he had been to see the Governor in regard to legislation affecting New York City. The Mayor objects to pending bills increasing salaries of city officials, except one. The exception is the one increasing the salary of the President of the Department of Taxes from $5,000 to $7,500, and the salary of the other Tax Commissioners from $4,000 to $5,000.

He opposed the increase of pay of Supt. of Buildings Brady from $5,000 to $7,500. He expressed to the Governor his emphatic disapproval of the bill to create a school teachers' pension fund, and also an increase in the salaries of policemen.

In regard to the new City Hall, he said that he and the other city officials were awaiting the action of the Legislature. If it decided to repeal the present law and keep the old City Hall on its present site, a new site would have to be selected. In case the Legislature decided to repeal the law the Building Commission will go ahead with the work as mapped out by it.

So far as rapid transit was concerned, he did not discuss the subject with the Governor or any one connected with the Legislature.

Questioned about a report from Albany that he had told a friend that he would not again be a candidate for Mayor, Gilroy said:

"The published statement conveys a wrong impression. No one has been authorized to make such an announcement for me. It is too early in the year to talk politics, and I do not care to say anything about the subject."

The Mayor is, of course, pleased, although he did not say so, that the bill to make the terms of his office permanent expire with his own was killed with the aid of Republican votes.

Another case was developed this morning. George Greer, thirty-four years old, a lodger at the Oliver Trust Hotel, Twenty-third street, was removed from Bellevue Hospital to-day on a charge of this morning, suffering from small-pox.

Nagle thinks it would be injudicious to remove the offices of the Bureau of Contagious Diseases and Vital Statistics from the Oliver Trust Hotel, which is in a panic condition in the city.

Harriet Harcourt proposes to raise the duty on cigars to 75 per cent.

In this event the entire tobacco trade of Great Britain will be revolutionized and Continental, Indian, Manila and Mexican cigars will entirely disappear from the market, as they could not, with the increase in duty, compete with home-made cigars. Havana cigars would also become much dearer.

The panic has revealed that gigantic clearances have been made from the bonded warehouses. Hundreds of cases of cigars, cigarettes and tobacco are delivered daily to importers, and the dock and customs officers are hardly able to cope with the demand of the importers.

Five New Cardinals-to-Be. ROME, April 12.—The Archbishops of Bologna, Milan and Ferrara, as well as Mons. TIMONY WAS RIGHT.

Walked Into Dr. Nagle's Office Thinking He Had Small-Pox.

Then Frightened Clerks in the Contagious Diseases Bureau.

There He Was Held and a Rigid Quarantine Maintained.

There was much excitement at the Bureau of Contagious Diseases, 209 Mulberry street this morning, when it was found that the building would have to undergo another quarantine and fumigation to-day.

At 8 o'clock this morning, James Timony, forty-one years old, who has been living for some time at the Great Northern Hotel, between Houston and Prince streets, on the Bowery, walked into Dr. Nagle's office in the Bureau of Vital Statistics by the Mott street entrance and said he thought he had small-pox. The clerks dropped everything and fled from the room in great haste. Dr. Timony led the men over to the Bureau of Contagious Diseases, where Dr. Drayton immediately discovered that the man was suffering from small-pox. The doctor ordered all the doors locked and declared the place under quarantine. No one was allowed to enter or depart from the building all the morning.

Timony was removed to the Reception Hospital at No. 16 of Sixteenth street, and subsequently taken to North Broadway.

William Scott, thirty-four years old, of 319 Bowery, walked into the Bureau yesterday afternoon, suffering from small-pox, and was told in the "Evening World," and the office was ordered to be closed and thoroughly fumigated.

The clerks in the office were just busy with the small-pox cases, and were not to be troubled with the subject. The morning that he was brought to the hospital, the fumigating nuisance when Timony entered, and the clerks were greatly exercised over their forced imprisonment for two days.

Dr. Doty feels quite alarmed over the increase in the small-pox during the past few days, and extra precaution will be taken to prevent the spreading of the disease.

TWO HURT IN A WRECK.

Washington Express Crashes Into a Freight at Portchester.

Sleeping-Car Passengers Run in Their Night Clothes.

Engine Smashed and Three Freight Cars Burned.

PORTCHESTER, N. Y., April 12.—The carelessness of a switchman caused a collision between the Washington Express and a freight train in the New Haven road yards at 3:30 o'clock this morning. Conductor St. Clair, of the freight, was seriously and perhaps fatally injured. He was taken to the hospital. His brakeman, James Kennedy, was also injured, but was able to go to his home.

The express locomotive was badly wrecked, and three freight cars were burned. The sleeping-cars were filled, and when the crash came the frightened passengers ran out in their night-clothes. None was injured, but all were badly shaken up. When they found they were in no immediate danger they scrambled back into the car and hurriedly dressed.

The express train, which is due at this place at 3:30 o'clock, but does not stop, was made up of seven cars, including three sleepers. It was running at a high rate of speed when it struck the freight train, which was pulled by the wrong lever, and the train went off on the switch where the freight cars were standing.

The engineer shut off steam and reversed the lever, but too late to avoid the crash. Strange to say, he and his fireman escaped with a few bruises.

The panic which followed was intensified by the sight of flames, and it was found that the hot coals from the wrecked express engine had ignited the freight car, into which it had crashed.

The local fire department was summoned, and by hard work the fire was confined to three cars, which were almost entirely consumed. The damage to the damage to rolling stock is estimated at several thousand dollars. The switchman who caused the accident has been suspended, and the Company will make a thorough investigation.

DRAKE WELL KNOWN HERE. The Watch Salesman Dropped Dead in an Elmhurst Hotel Yesterday.

Junius P. Drake, the travelling salesman for the Rockford (Ill.) Watch Company, who died suddenly of heart failure, was buried yesterday in the Elmhurst, yesterday, was well known to the jewelry trade of this city.

He established an agency of the Company in this city about six years ago at 11 Madison street, but the office was discontinued in January last. President of the Company, was his brother-in-law.

Mr. Drake was about sixty years old, of slight figure and a florid complexion. He was a widower without children and lived in apartments on the west side.

A brother is in the employ of the Erie Railroad as a ticket agent at the foot of Chambers street. The body will probably be taken to Rockford for interment.

QUINN HAS A CLOSE CALL. Nearly Asphyxiated in His Newsstand Last Night.

John Quinn, a newsdealer, who keeps a stand on Flatbush avenue, near the Long Island Railroad Depot, Brooklyn, narrowly escaped death last night. Quinn started a fire in a small stove in his stand, and while the stove was at height, went to sleep.

About an hour later Policeman Nicholas Higgins, of the Bergen street station, noticed while passing along Flatbush avenue smoke issuing from between the boards of a newsstand. He was thinking the stand was a fire. Breaking open the door he found Quinn lying face downward upon the floor. The stove was sending out coal gas and smoke, and the air was almost stifling. Quinn was dragged out on the sidewalk in an unconscious condition, and an ambulance was called. The surgeon soon restored Quinn to consciousness.

A NEWSWOMAN OF BIRTH. She Was the Daughter of a Bavarian Chief Justice.

ST. PAUL, April 12.—Mrs. Clothilde Hohenberg, aged seventy-six years, who died here last night, was the youngest of eighteen children of Leonhard von Hohenberg, Chief Justice of the Royal Court of Appeals of Bavaria, and of Maria Walburga von Schillingen, a member of one of the oldest and best families of Germany. She had had excellent educational advantages, her musical education alone being of a high order. She came to St. Paul in 1861, and soon afterwards opened a small newsstand on Broadway, where she remained for several years past she peddled papers and books, and also a card being in rather straitened circumstances.

Wrong Address Was Given. John Davis, who has been in charge of the house 1111 Broadway, Brooklyn, writes to the Evening World to-day that he was misled by a party in that house Monday night. It was stated that during the party a Mrs. Davis had been killed by her clothing being caught in the door of the house. Davis says that he was not in the house at the time, and that the address was wrong.

AFIRE, HE RAN FOR THE ROOF.

Colored Man Perhaps Fatally Injured in a Small Blaze.

Was Intoxicated, Lamp Exploded, and There Was a Panic.

He Suspects Night Clerk Harry Howard of Collision.

An exploding lamp and an intoxicated man caused a panic at 3 o'clock this morning in the four-story frame house at 206 East Eighth street, James M. Oliver, colored, a furnace tender, was badly burned. He is now in the Presbyterian Hospital in a critical condition.

Oliver lives on the top floor of the building with his wife. When he reached his home just after midnight he was intoxicated. He went to bed leaving a lamp burning on the mantel-piece.

The other tenants were awakened at 3:06 A. M. by the shock of an explosion. Oliver, still intoxicated, was awakened, too. He jumped up and found that the room was afire. The lamp had exploded, screaming from the room, and had five tenants, alarmed by the explosion and the woman's shrieks, jumped from their beds and made a mad rush for the street.

Oliver snatched a blanket from the bed and endeavored to smother the flames. They were either beyond control or he worked so clumsily that he only succeeded in making the flames catch his clothing. Then he directed his attention to saving himself.

In the mean time Mrs. Oliver was on the pavement, standing in the rain, surrounded by the shouting group of half-dazed tenants. Everybody thought the house was on fire, but no one moved to help her. John Duncan, who was the first of the tenants to recover his senses, went up stairs to make an attempt to reach the roof. He found the negro rolling on the bed. He was enveloped in flames and was trying to extinguish the fire.

Duncan made an effort to put a blanket about Oliver, but crazed with pain, the negro jumped up and ran from the room. In the rear of the hall a short ladder leads to the roof. Up this the burning man began to climb, but the hatchway was locked and he could not reach the roof.

The other tenants now appeared, and Oliver was wrapped in blankets and the blaze extinguished. The damage to property was only $25.

Oliver was badly burned about the body. All his hair was burned from his head, and he was in a critical condition. Oliver inhaled the flames. If he did there is little chance of saving him.

Mother and Babe Burned to Death. FARGO, N. D., April 12.—Mrs. Lewis Larsen and her one-year-old baby were burned to death yesterday at their home in Fargo. It is thought that the baby's dress caught fire, and the mother was enveloped in the flames in endeavoring to extinguish them.

INDUSTRIALS THE FEATURE. But Trading Is Light on the Stock Exchange.

The industrials were the feature of speculation this morning, but the trading even in this group was light. The dealings are still characterized by strength, and the bears are unable to cover their outstanding short lines. Whenever the market attempts prices are quickly advanced.

As sterling exchange keeps firm there is talk of gold shipments by Saturday's steamer, but the Street takes the matter philosophically, and if exports should really be made it is doubtful whether they would have more than a passing influence on the market.

TEXAN HANGED AND SHOT. Lynched by a Mob in the Presence of His Invalid Wife.

GATESVILLE, Tex., April 12.—The people in this town yesterday morning wrought over the cruel lynching of Ed Cash by a mob on Monday last. The victim was dragged out of his home in the presence of his invalid wife and hanged to a tree but a few yards from the house. Not satisfied with this, the mob added the useless body with bullets.

The murderers have not yet been captured. Mrs. Cash is momentarily expected to die. What prompted the lynching is unknown.

THINKS IT A BADGER GAME.

Rogers Says Mary Jennings Robbed Him in a Hotel.

He Suspects Night Clerk Harry Howard of Collision.

Thomas Rogers, twenty-five years old, of 122 Third street, employed as a trimmer in a neckwear house, believed that a badger game was played on him early this morning. He figured both as a complainant and a prisoner at the Yorkville Police Court. He charged a pretty brunette, named Mary Jennings, aged twenty-four, of 142 East Seventeenth street, with the theft of $50, while he was accused of intoxication.

Rogers says he was accosted by Mary in Fourteenth street, near Irving place, at about 2:30 o'clock this morning, and accompanied her to the Stanley House, at 140 Third avenue. Rogers, who admits he had been drinking, but denies that he was drunk, had made collections for the firm during the day, and had five $10 bills in his inside vest pocket when he met the woman. While at the hotel he missed the money. He accused the woman of taking it, and when he demanded its return he says she made an outcry.

The next moment he heard rap on the door, and when he failed to answer it Harry Howard, the night clerk of the hotel, called to him. Rogers says that Howard asked a woman what was the matter, and that when she refused to answer he called for the police. Rogers caught him by the coat collar and said: "Harry, are you going on my bad game?" He walked away without answering, and she was locked up.

The other tenants now appeared, and Oliver was wrapped in blankets and the blaze extinguished. The damage to property was only $25.

Oliver was badly burned about the body. All his hair was burned from his head, and he was in a critical condition. Oliver inhaled the flames. If he did there is little chance of saving him.

EXTRA. 2 O'CLOCK.

RESCUED IN THE BREECHES.

Captain and Crew of the Ritchie Taken Off by Life Savers.

Three Other Vessels Reported Ashore Further South on the Jersey Coast.

DAMAGE AT CONEY ISLAND. Again the Poor Man Gets Some of the Rich Man's Sand by the Storm's Freaks.

POINT PLEASANT, N. J., April 12.—After hours of peril in the terrific storm of yesterday the captain and crew of the schooner Susan H. Ritchie, which was driven ashore here yesterday afternoon, were rescued by the life-savers of the Bayhead station.

The Ritchie had been watched all the afternoon by the life-savers. They saw the brave effort Capt. Marvin made to save his vessel, and when night fell it was apparent that she was doomed. It was then believed that all on board would be lost. The schooner was dragging her anchor, and was slowly but surely being driven ashore by the storm.

At 8 o'clock the schooner struck the outer bar. The big waves began to break over her, and all the life-saving crew got to work to do what they could to rescue the men on board.

The mortars were brought out and the line shot out towards the stranded craft. All the natives from miles around gathered on the beach to watch the men. After half a dozen fruitless efforts a line fell directly across the deck of the Ritchie, and a great cheer went up from the men on shore when the word was passed that it had been made fast to one of the schooner's masts.

The breeches buoy was soon rigged and at 9 o'clock the first man from the schooner was brought ashore. Half a dozen men rushed into the surf to help him ashore. With ten minutes Capt. Marvin, the last man to leave the schooner, had been rescued.

The men were nearly dead from exhaustion. They said they did everything in their power to save the vessel, but it was impossible for a sail to hold in such a storm.

They knew there was a ledge of rocks five miles off Pleasant Point and they tried to get there, believing they could get their anchor to hold, but strive as they did it was impossible to keep off shore.

They had practically given up hope when they struck the bar. Capt. Marvin and his men were hoisted in the Bayhead life saving station last night, and this morning the captain went to New York.
